Translation II builds on the skills that the students developed in Translation I. The course introduces students to the notions of text type and register and raises their awareness as far as the importance these have in determining the process of doing translation. Aside from developing the students' translation skills, the course contributes to their language skills, i.e., reading, writing, vocabulary, and grammar.
5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): TRN340-3 Translation 1
6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):
7. Course Main Objective(s)
Upon the completion of the course, students will be able to translate a variety of different types of texts appropriately and accurately from English into Arabic and vice versa, in addition to the ability to the identification of any text type.

4. Course general Description
This is an introductory course meant to study the structures of sentences according to modern syntactic theories. Students study word categories, phrase structures, and phrase structure rules to build constituents and then end up with the formation of sentences. Then, there is a shift to the use of the Transformational Rules to account for the types of movements, namely, NP- movement, Aux- movement, and Wh- movements that take place at D-level to get S-level. The English language is used to illustrate these derivations.

2. Course type

a. University  College  Department  Track  Others

b. Required  Elective

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 10/Year 4

4. Course general Description

Research Methods capitalizes on the knowledge and skills the students have acquired over their three years of BA studies. It introduces them to the principles, approaches, techniques, and ethics of conducting research and acquaints them with the salient traits that characterize research in Applied Linguistics, Literature, and Translation Studies. The course also guides students to benefit from the resources and applications information technology has made available for researchers. The course follows a cyclical pattern of progression; it echoes writers' non-linear thinking, reading, and writing processes.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): ENG217-3 Writing 4

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

This course seeks to:

- introduce students to academic research,
- equip students with the basic skills to prepare a research proposal and conduct research,
- initiate students to undertake research.

2. Course type

a. University  College  Department  Track  Others

b. Required  Elective

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 10/Year 4

4. Course general Description

Research Methods capitalizes on the knowledge and skills the students have acquired over their three years of BA studies. It introduces them to the principles, approaches, techniques, and ethics of conducting research and acquaints them with the salient traits that characterize research in Applied Linguistics, Literature, and Translation Studies. The course also guides students to benefit from the resources and applications information technology has made available for researchers. The course follows a cyclical pattern of progression; it echoes writers' non-linear thinking, reading, and writing processes.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): ENG217-3 Writing 4

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

This course seeks to:

- introduce students to academic research,
- equip students with the basic skills to prepare a research proposal and conduct research,
- initiate students to undertake research.

2. Course type

a. University  College  Department  Track  Others

b. Required  Elective

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 9/Year 3

4. Course general Description

This course is based on the language skills that students have developed in writing, reading, and grammar courses in previous levels and paves the way for them to take — with an already strong background — the more advanced Translation II and Translation III courses. It introduces them to the basic concepts and characteristics of translation work, dictionary use, different types and genres of texts, etc. Aside from developing the students' translation skills, it contributes to their language skills, i.e., reading, writing, vocabulary, and grammar.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any):

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

1. Translate language of words, phrases, and idiomatic expressions, having understood the source text properly.
2. Use mono-and-bi-lingual dictionaries to recognize the intended meanings of words and phrases in their own contexts.
3. Translate sentences and short texts from English into Arabic and vice versa.
4. Use contextual cues to understand and identify the right or appropriate equivalents in the source and target texts in question.
5. Translate short texts in a wide range of text types and genres (religion, literature, science, media, education, etc.), set in different text genres (exposition, narration, description, information, etc.).

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 9/Year 3

4. Course general Description

This course introduces students to the developments in Western drama from Antiquity to the present day. After briefly discussing the main function and elements of Ancient Greek drama, the course focuses on two pivotal moments: the Age of Shakespeare, characterized by the quest for universal values, and the Modernist period, characterized by the decay of Western ideals due to the horrors of the two World Wars. Two texts will be studied in their entirety, one by Shakespeare and one by Shaw or another Modernist playwright, in order to illustrate the shift from universal values to social activism. Although the course offers a broad perspective on Modernist issues (from Shaw's social optimism to feminism, the theater of anger, and the theater of the absurd), only one Modernist play is considered in detail due to time constraints. Besides the diachronic perspective, the course reinforces the fundamentals of drama, partially studied in the course Introduction to Literary Forms. By course end, students will be able to understand and analyze dramatic techniques and elements such as plot, character, setting, theme, structure, symbols, and leitmotifs in any given dramatic text.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): ENG330-5 Introduction to Literary Forms

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

- To introduce students to the theory of drama and its relevance in a modern context;
- To provide students with a chronological/historical background of Drama in its diachronic evolution
- To reinforce students' skills of comparison, analysis, and critical thinking of various dramatic texts in light of modern literary approaches
- To promote students' knowledge of issues of gender, class, and race as well as the relationship between texts, authors, and readers as categories of literary analysis
- To foster the students' analytical and critical approach to drama through research assignments.

This course is designed as an introduction to short fiction, especially different short stories. Students will be introduced to a range of short texts written in English and some significant short stories translated into English. The course aims to broaden students' understanding and appreciation of the range of writing in short forms. The course provides students with insight into various types of short stories. It reinforces the theory studied in Introduction to Literary Forms (the definition of short story, the characteristics of the language of short story, symbolism, themes, etc.). It introduces 7 short stories belonging to different literary movements.

4. Course general Description
This course explores many of the classic and current topics in sound patterns of English and other world languages, as well as the theories and skills used to analyze them. The course explores the reality of the phoneme, productivity of patterns, and interactions with phonetics. This course also deals with the analyses of stress patterns, syllable structure, lexical classes, phonotactics rules, and distinctive features of sounds.
5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): ENG321-5 Phonetics
6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):
7. Course Main Objective(s)
Upon completion of this course, students are expected to be able to:
1. Distinguish between Phonetics and Phonology.
2. Describe the sound patterns in English.
3. Transcribe sounds in IPA symbols.
4. Distinguish between phonemes and allophones.
5. Explain the various phonological processes in English.
6. Illustrate the syllable tress and syllabification.
7. Identify the stress rules of English words and sentences.

4. Course general Description
Grammar 3 relates form and meaning at the level of the sentence and above the sentence (in paragraphs and verbal exchanges). It revises, develops, and intensifies learners' understanding of the verb tenses already presented in the earlier two grammar courses. It describes the forms, positions, and functions of the word-class members: Nouns, Pronouns, and Modals. It stresses the necessity of the subject-verb agreement to form correct English sentences.

b. Required  Elective

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 4/Year 2

4. Course general Description

This course is designed to develop the writing skill of students equivalent to the intermediate level of the Common European Framework (B1 CEFR). The course covers topics related to the practical life of students. It adopts a three-tier analysis strategy consisting of vocabulary, grammatical structure, and writing composition. Overall, it offers students a wide range of practice opportunities ranging from the level of the sentence to that of the paragraph, concentrating intensively on its organizational parts: the topic sentence, the body of the paragraph, and the concluding sentence.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): ENG116-5 Writing 2

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

The course intends to upgrade and consolidate the writing skills already acquired previously in the writing courses for levels 1 and 2. Students are guided to gather, organize, and analyze information in order to produce a cohesive piece of writing. The ability to produce a standard, simple and logical essay is the core aim of this course.

2. Course type

a. University  College  Department  Track  Others

b. Required  Elective

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 3/Year 1

4. Course general Description

The course prepares a student to become a better student and helps with managing time and organizing work, taking effective notes, teaches skills on taking tests, prioritizing assignments, getting the most from teachers, lectures, technology, and quickly handling problems, as well as many different methods and skills to improve success at university level academic endeavors.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any):

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

A good deal of evidence is present to show a positive correlation between the improvement of students' study skills and achievement. This course offers an accessible manual to the learner for improvement of his/her study skills and determines strategies, if learned and practiced in the classroom, home study space, and exam-taking sessions, that could result in the gradual academic achievement of the student. The course also focuses on time management, learning strategies, reading, note taking, stress management, and other relevant strategies to improve study skills.

Main Objectives:

The key objective of the Study Skills course is to help students manage their own success. It does this by:

1. Promoting understanding of how good marks and successful outcomes are possibilities for any student;
2. Clarifying expectations of conventions, study tasks, and ways of thinking typical of Higher Education;
3. Supporting you in identifying your strengths as well as what else you can do to achieve well;
4. Developing effective strategies – study habits, techniques, and thinking that optimize learning;
5. Encouraging a personal approach – one that works best for you
6. Providing step-by-step guidance on how to undertake academic tasks typical of Higher Education

7. Offering insights on how to tackle study activities that many students find difficult
8. Providing resources to help students evaluate, reflect upon, and manage their studies more easily;
9. Encouraging students to evolve into a "life-long learner" who has the ability to self-evaluate, reflect and review; and plan for long-term and short-term life goals with an eye to a successful career;

3. Level/year at which this course is offered: Semester 3/Year 1

4. Course general Description

This course emphasizes on developing writing skills among students. They will commence with paragraph structure and organization to move later on to the different types of paragraphs, focusing on the use of simple sentences and structures that allow the students to control their writing, i.e., the paragraph. The appropriate and effective organization of the paragraphs is not limited to; topic sentences, supporting sentences, or concluding sentences; however, it goes beyond such patent requirements to emphasize capitalization, punctuation, incorrect sentences, fragments, and run-on sentences.

5. Pre-requirements for this course (if any): ENG112-5 Writing 1

6. Co- requirements for this course (if any):

7. Course Main Objective(s)

- Classify mainly four types of paragraphs (descriptive, process, opinion and narrative)
- Apply their practical knowledge and strategies of writing to succeed in content coursework.
- Demonstrate their knowledge to express their opinions, discuss their ideas, and share their experiences through written communication.
- Apply their knowledge to analyze authentic student paragraphs, which eventually leads to academic and professional competence.
- Synthesize their acquired knowledge of composing various types of paragraphs for succeeding in advanced courses such as applied linguistics and English literature.
- Use language appropriately for various contexts in writing paragraphs.

4. Course general Description

This is an introductory course in English grammar. Basic grammatical rules that help students speak and write simple sentences are taught throughout this course. The basic tenses (present and past) are presented through a large number of examples and exercises to help students grab the gist of these tenses (Form and Use). Other grammatical aspects in the structure of the English sentence are also presented. The main place and time prepositions are explained to the students and are reinforced through a wide range of exercises. The English nouns (count and non-count) are also discussed with regard to their plural forms and other determiners and quantifiers that come with them. The usage of definite and indefinite articles is also explained.
